

THAT'S NO LADY HE'S MY WIFE!

HUSBAND: Duped by his "wife"

by Reveille Reporter

DUTCH electrician Jan Koeman's attractive Oriental wife wore slinky silk dresses and sexy nighties.

She took the Pill because, she said, she didn't want to have children.

But she was always very modest—never undressing completely in front of her husband.

The young bride also allowed sexual contact only in a darkened bedroom and under the covers. And even the shy bride would not allow Jan to caress her all over.

Excuses

Often she would make excuses to avoid sex.

For the bride, beautiful Thai-born Oranong Suriyawong, was hiding a dreadful secret.

She was really a man!

At first the simple electrician had believed that her coy ways were due to her strictly religious upbringing in her native Thailand.

But after almost two years of this strange life, even trusting Jan began to think that all was not well with his marriage.

The awful truth came out one morning when the Dutchman sneaked back into the house instead of going to work.

Peep

He tiptoed to the bedroom door and peeped in through the keyhole . . . and his growing suspicions were confirmed, as he stared in disbelief at his naked "wife" for the first time.

Now the heartbroken 42-year-old husband has

"I found I had been sleeping with a man" had his "wife" banned from the house by court order and is seeking to have the "marriage" annulled.

Jan is also furious about the money it cost him to wed his Oriental beauty. He paid for the lavish wedding reception and forked out £250 to Oranong's parents according to what he was told was Thai custom.

He also had to give his bride-to-be another £750 for her visa and passport.

"I realise now that she used the money to get forged documents," he said.

Nightmare

The couple's courtship had been blissful. They met at the hotel in Bangkok where Oranong was a receptionist. The electrician fell head over heels in love.

At the end of his Far East holiday, Jan and Oranong had a tearful parting at the airport.

A few months later the jubilant Dutchman flew back to the wedding . . . and the start of what was to become a nightmare.

The trusting husband's suspicions began when he discovered that his wife was working as a prostitute.

The proprietor of a licensed brothel telephoned Jan and told him that some of his clients had complained that the dusky beauty was really a man.

Jan had her followed and soon it became clear that she was working as a prostitute.

It was the last straw for the faithful husband. He determined to discover the truth and that was when he spied through the bedroom keyhole and saw for himself.

"I was disgusted when I found that for two years I had been sleeping with a man," he said.

Now the luckless electrician is alone again and waiting for his marriage to be annulled.

ORIENTAL BRIDE: The beauty who is really a man