Chapter officer wins Pocono prize

The fifth "Princess of the Poconos" award was handed out last month to Michelle Lynn, director of membership activities for the Greater Philadelphia Chapter. This was the second time that a Philadelphia chapter officer has garnered this award. Former chapter leader Teri Kay was the first princess.

A Princess of the Poconos is named each spring and fall at the CDS Paradise In The Poconos weekends. The princess and her court are chosen by popular vote from among the event's participants.

"Michelle was the overwhelming choice for princess," said JoAnn Roberts, the event organizer. "What amazes me even more," she said, "is that all five princesses have been first-timers at the weekend."

Lynn was astounded when her name was called for the award. "I'll remember this for as long as I can," she bubbled while posing with her court for photographs.

This was the second award in as many weeks for Lynn, who received recognition at the Spring Ball for her chapter activities.

Mayor Goode cites Pride month

Philadelphia Mayor W. Wilson Goode marked June as Gay and Lesbian Pride Month with this message, sent to all 32,000 city employees with their paychecks: "Mayor Goode Salutes All Sexual Minorities During Pride Month."

Peg Conway, executive director of the Mayor's Commission for Sexual Minorities (MCSM), said the message recognizes transgendered people as well as gays and lesbians. "During Pride Month we must not forget that bisexual and transgendered people are a part of this community and part of this civil rights struggle. The role of the MCSM is to represent all of these groups and to ensure fair and equal access ... for all sexual minorities."

National officer honored at Ball

A surprise award ceremony took place during the Spring Ball and Birthday party to honor the contributions of three individuals to Renaissance.

Angela Gardner, presiding over the ball, first made two award presentations to Michelle Lynn and Gloria A. Lange, officers of the Greater Philadelphia chapter.

Gardner then called Alison Laing to the podium for brief, surprise remarks about JoAnn Roberts. Melanie Bryan, Trudi Henry, Paula Sinclair and Gardner, who along with Laing and Roberts formed the first Renaissance board of directors also spoke about Roberts' contribution to the organization. Together they all presented Roberts with a framed certificate which reads:

"We, the undersigned, hereby sincerely declare our eternal love, appreciation and respect to JoAnn Roberts for her dedication, caring and exemplary efforts in the founding and development of the Renaissance Education Association. Awarded on the occasion of the celebration of the third anniversary of the founding of Renaissance, May 11, 1990 A.D."

Roberts is considered the motivating force behind the founding of Renaissance. She brought the five presenters together to form the organization, and she served as the first managing director.

Roberts, for once, was caught totally off-guard. At the podium, she said she was speechless, but quickly recovered. She thanked each of the five presenters and called them her "extended family." She then thanked all those present who had signed the certificate.

In closing, Roberts said that while she may have had a major part in getting the group started, it was, and still is, the effort and determination of its current members that keep it going so strongly.

Know Your Reasons

Recently three individuals appeared on "The Sally Jesse Raphael" show. Here we have a lady who not only mixes metaphors but probably has red wine with fish as well. She had one each pre-op and post-op transsexual and a female impersonator, and entitled this segment: "Men who cross the gender gap to get better jobs."

From the producer's point of view this must have seemed a topic no other show had done. But, from the viewpoint of those of us in the gender community, it's like having a show about the similarities between rocks, oranges and balloons. The sad part is the millions of viewers who got trapped in the middle learning nothing, being misinformed and misdirected as to the realities of the gender-conflicted.

Sally's guests included: a self-touted, post-op, M-t-F transsexual running for mayor of her California town; a pre-op, M-t-F transsexual who is an ex-biker and appeared on the show with 'her' wife; and a male who "changes his sex" to get work as a singer.

The whole premise of this show was that in their original sex roles these individuals could not cut it in society. They were supposedly either outcast (the biker), couldn't get work (the singer), or were more successful (the would-be mayor and businesswoman).

I am not going to take anything away from any of the panelists for indeed they were seemingly all successful or better people as women than as men. Each of their achievements were notable. But this program gave the viewing audience the wrong impression; it is okay to change sex simply because you ain't cuttin' it as a dude.

Let's dissect each of the individuals to uncover some meaning to this mindless show.

Probably the least harmful was the male/female singer. Though he had a lot of talent, the entertainment world was not beating a path to his door for singing gigs. His wife, as a joke one evening, made him up and he rehearsed in the female voice. They were both surprised when he came across better sans the male image. He tried out his new act and was hired on the spot. Since he changed sex roles for his onstage work, he has worked continuously, but he never lets the audience, or most employers, know of his true sex. (He is not a transvestite.) Is he wrong to do this? No, he's not. His reasons are valid. He is merely doing an act, nothing more, nothing less.

The pre-op TS (with wife) in "before" and "after" photos was remarkable. Before, he was the icon of what Mad magazine would epitomize as the bearded, tattooed, beer drinkin', leather-clad biker. The kind that crushes Coors cans on his forehead - before they're empty. The "after" shots showed a mild mannered, meek, yet husky woman. She went for reassignment in Belgium and had a heart attack in surgery. Her reassignment has been on hold until her health improves. From the discussion that followed we learned the tough exterior was just a put-on show for her true feminine feelings.

We can all identify with that thought, but is she a better person as a female than male? From what we could see on the show, maybe. But is it a logical decision to seek sex reassignment simply because you think people will like you better as a woman than as a man? Her rationale is a bit twisted. I can't condone, nor recommend, anybody do what she's doing because they think they'll be better liked.

You have to like yourself before you start the road to transition in order to successfully finish. This woman didn't like her old self, and I don't think she is too happy with the new one either.

Finally, we come to the post-op transsexual woman. Terri made no bones about her gender issues, and seems to have gotten a good response from the local public vis-a-vis her honesty. She had been a very successful businesswoman for over 15 years before the bid for political office. She noted that although successful before the change, she was even more so following the surgeon's snip. She did not, as we are lead to believe by the show's title, jump the gender fence to get a better job. Terri was simply taking advantage of her gregarious personality and ability to influence people. No problem here with the reasons; I applaud her efforts in the political ring. Sally tried to make it sound like Terri changed sexes just so she could become mayor. Terri's motives were sound. Sally's efforts at responsible journalism were not.

Besides unmasking thinly veiled attempts to raise talk-shows ratings, this article has another point: analyze why you may want to cross the gender line. Is it because of your inner feelings, or is it because you are not successful in your current gender/sex role? If you're unhappy in your life, you can't be happy in your work. If you're unhappy at work, you can't be successful. But that's something you need to take a long hard look at before you do anything rash. I was very successful in a pseudo-male role, and have been very successful in my many years in the female role. Don't try "the other sex" just because you aren't happy in your work!

As for Sally, I will only say that she set back the public's understanding of transsexualism 5,000 years. She caused more problems than she made contributions. I wish she would do a show about transsexualism, talking only about personal gender issues and problems.

I give Sally and her stupid show two thumbs down.

JoAnn Roberts SOAPBOX

I've lost a friend to "transsexual fever" My "lost" friend, we'll call her Tes, is planning on a new life in a femme persona. The problem is she's doing it outside of the Standards of Care. Tes is taking female hormones without proper medical supervision, and has had facial plastic surgery. But she has had no psychological counseling. She thinks that reassignment will make all of her present personal problems disappear. Tes is headed for disaster, but won't listen to anyone.

Issue #6 of Gender Expressions is a diatribe on the Standards of Care which were developed by the Harry Benjamin International Gender Dysphoria Association. Most ethical gender clinicians follow the standards, which include counseling and a two-year real life test.

The polemicists at GenEx want the standards abolished. They want "surgery on demand" for all self-diagnosed transsexuals. That's fine except for two problems: the diagnosis of transsexualism itself and a refusal to accept responsibility for one's actions.

There generally seems to be two very different types of people who label themselves M-t-F transsexuals. The first type has known they are transsexual from a very early age. From their teen years forward their only goal is to correct the error that nature appears to have set on them. If you meet one of these people, you have no doubt that reassignment is exactly what they need.

The other type is Dr. Richard Docter's "secondary" transsexual, a person who identifies as transsexual in middle age or later following years and years of crossdressing. If you meet one of these people, you may wonder if they are making the right choice, the evidence of masculinity is so strong in them.

So what? If they want reassignment, why not just give it to them, like cosmetic surgery? Because people change their minds; they make mistakes. And a lot of people are not willing to accept the responsibility for their own mistakes. They look for a scapegoat. The doctor shouldn't have done the surgery without being absolutely sure. It's not my fault. Blame him.

You can't expect surgery on demand unless you are able to accept the responsibility that YOU might be making a mistake. My ex-friend, Tes, is not accepting responsibility for her actions and the editors of GenEx neglected to discuss accepting responsible at all.

THE NEWSQUEENTM Paula Jordan Sinclair

The political season is rapidly approaching, and that makes us wonder if there are any transgendered folks who profess to be Republicans, especially if they have read what Rep. William E. Dannemeyer (R-Calif.) told his Golden State GOP colleagues.

"We do not endorse special recognition for gays or cannibals, transvestites or people who practice bestiality. Any acts of human indecency, we'll leave that element to the Democrats."

Unfortunately, there are those people who crossdress, do terrible things, and give the rest of us bad reputations. One of those people is Florida Highway Patrolman Timothy Scott Harris.

Harris, an eight year veteran of the patrol, confessed to murdering a woman he stopped for a traffic violation. He said he killed the woman after they had sex on the I-95 median strip because of stress from his impending divorce. Harris became a strong suspect in the murder after his estranged wife said that Harris broke into her house wearing nothing but panties and pantyhose and tried to beat her.

Not only was this story from Florida bad enough for the public image of transgendered people, but last month we may have lost one of our oldest role models — Viscount Cornbury, Royal Governor of the British colonies of New York and New Jersey from 1702 to 1708. A scholar now claims the reports that Cornbury paraded about the street of New York dressed as a woman were a vicious libel begun by his political enemies in the colonies. Patricia U. Bonomi, a professor at New York University, also claims that the famous portrait reputed to be of Cornbury in drag is actually the likeness of an unknown — but undoubtedly ugly — woman.

Cornbury has long been held up, depending on your point of view, as a transvestite who became successful in spite of his crossdressing, or as an example of the eccentricity of transvestism. Part of the story is that Cornbury, who was a cousin of England's Queen Anne, believed that he resembled his cousin so much that he dressed like her in order to better represent her to the colonies. The story has been repeated in so many books that Bonomi is seen as something of a rebel.

Meanwhile, the New York Historical Society, which still has the painting on prominent display at its New York City museum, and still identifies it as a portrait of Cornbury, will conduct its own research into the matter.

While we lose one famous member of the club, we perhaps gain another. According to a supermarket tabloid, Barbra Streisand is worried that her son Jason Gould, 23, is a gay drag queen. The reasons for the maternal concern? Since he was a teenager, Jason has shown a desire to do drag and displayed talent for impersonating Dianna Ross and Streisand herself. But the clincher for Mom came when Jason moved out of her ocean-side mansion and into his own apartment in West Hollywood, the L.A. region's prime gay neighborhood. Perhaps it was all that worry that caused Streisand to lose her temper when Jason appeared at her 48th birthday party recently wearing one of her designer creations. Then again, she could have been angry because he had ripped out the seams in the $6,000 gown.

Speaking of celebrities, here are a few tidbits you won't hear on "Entertainment Tonight," and a few you might.

Stories about Divine still appear in entertainment columns months after his death. According to an article in Vanity Fair, this is how Glenn Milstead, broke the news of his new career to his parents:

"Frances and Harris Milstead were unsure what their son was doing with the skinny, long-haired Waters boy until one day in 1968. They opened the trunk of their car and found a pink Channel-like 'Jackie Kennedy' suit covered with fake blood — a prop from Waters' latest 16mm atrocity (Eat Your Makeup). 'What is this?' they gasped. Glenn knew they could never possibly understand his art. 'I am Jackie Kennedy!' he screamed.

Charles Pierce, the inimitable Bette Davis impersonator, recently told an interviewer how he got started in the business:

"An earthquake hurled me into Mother's shoes and a dress slipped off a hanger and cascaded over my head. I took one look and myself and said, 'F—, I'm in show biz.'"

Is Sen. John Warner (R-Va.), the former hubby of Elizabeth Taylor, trying to come out of the closet? Warner's picture recently appeared in a newspaper ad for Annette Dean, a dress shop near Richmond.

While a "production error" was blamed for switching Warner's photo with that of a female model, an aide to the senator did not actually deny that his boss might crossdress. "To my knowledge, he doesn't wear dresses," said Phil Smith. A spokeswoman for the store would only say "You never know who you'll run into shopping at Annette Dean."

To wrap up the celebrity section, here's news about two gender switching roles played by women.

Pat Carrol, who recently played the voice of the evil sea-witch in Disney's The Little Mermaid, won raves reviews for her portrayal of

Sir John Falstaff in Shakespeare's The Merry Wives of Windsor at the Folger Theater in Washington. While it was common in the Bard's day for boys to play female roles, it is uncommon for a woman to take on a leading male role. New York Times critic Frank Rich said Carrol played Falstaff "so convincingly as a man ... that he still seems masculine when the plot requires him to adopt the drag outfit of a witch."

Actress Tilda Winton's next film role allows her to change sexes in the midst of a movie. She's been cast as Orlando in the upcoming film version of the peculiar 1929 novel by Virginia Woolf, also called Orlando. The fable, which involves the transformation of a man into a woman, gave Woolf the opportunity to explore gender roles and sexual orientation.

Real life sex changes are sometimes as dramatic as those in books or in the movies. Take New Hampshire transsexual Sarah Luiz for example. Her sex reassignment was halted after Blue Cross said they would no longer pay for the procedures, and so Luiz had decided to stop hormone therapy and revert to being a man. Just as things looked darkest for the 24-year-old transsexual, an unnamed surgeon stepped forward to donate surgery after he saw a television report on Luiz and her $30 million lawsuit against Blue Cross.

Things were just as bright for a transsexual student at the University of Alabama in Birmingham who won a seat in the school's Undergraduate Student Government Association after campaigning as "the only transsexual to run."

The student qualified for the race under the name of Kenneth Wright, but later changed his name to Caitlin Kiernan. She received the second highest number of votes for any candidate in the election.

Kiernan attributes her win to her visibility. She stands 6 feet 4 inches tall and sometimes dresses as a woman for classes.

The issue of visibility came too late to prevent a 38-year-old Chinese peasant from being bilked out of the $155 he paid to a marriage broker to find him a wife.

The couple hit it off well, and the wedding was held in the eastern province of Shan-dong. It wasn't until the honeymoon that the peasant discovered that his bride was a man.

A $5000 Bustline? Ridiculous but true.

That's right! Some women pay thousands of dollars for perfect breasts through cosmetic surgery, but you don't have to. You can have the illusion of perfect breasts without the danger of surgery and without taking hormones.

The new Illusion breastforms can be glued to the body and worn for days at a time. Wear them for any occasion, even swimming. They duplicate the form and weight of natural breasts, including the nipple. They look real and feel real to the touch!

Illusion breastforms are hand-made to order in four sizes; Small (32-34 A & B cup), Medium (36-38 B & C cup), Large (40-42 C & D cup) and Extra-large (44 D cup). They are available in flesh and sepia tones to match most skin.

These forms are made of the highest quality medical grade silicone. They will not leak if punctured and they are backed with a 5 year pro-rated guarantee.

Illusion breastforms are not as expensive as you might think a nearly custom form might cost.

Each set of Illusion forms comes complete with instructions, adhesives, cleaner and skin prep. Write today for the full details on how to order one of the finest breastforms available.

GREELEY, COLO. - Survival columnist JoAnn Altman Stringer has written a book entitled, The Transsexual's Survival Guide to Transition and Beyond. The book covers a range of topics from choosing a therapist to networking a new social life. The book will be published later this summer.

Stringer would also like to edit a book of real life experiences from other pre- and post-operative transsexuals. She is interested in good or bad experiences with family, friends, jobs, or any aspect of their life. Names will be kept confidential if desired. Names are not as important as the experiences.

Stringer is a post-operative transsexual woman who is married, with step-children, and owns her own professional photography business.

Interested parties may correspond with Stringer care of Southwind Studios, 2036 1st Ave., Suite 211, Greeley, CO 80631.

We applaud Stringer's efforts to return something to the transgendered community. Most often, successful transsexuals just disappear.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. - We're very pleased to see other groups copying our style. The "Partyline" section of Puff & Stuff, the newsletter of I.M.E., (I am me.) has snippets of news from other support groups and the general news. They even used two items from this newsletter.

But more importantly, I.M.E. is considering different community service activities to boost the public's dim view of crossdressers. Some of the activities suggested were: volunteering to assist at the regional Special Olympics, aid to the hearing impaired, aid to the elderly, and volunteering to assist local Public Broadcasting television stations during their fund-raising telethons.

We really love the last suggestion, but we're afraid patrons might call the station and ask that their last contribution be returned. Overall, the idea is a good one.

Friends in the western Michigan area can contact I.M.E. at P. O. Box 1153, Grand Rapids, MI 49501

ALEXANDRIA, VA. - It's May as we write this and it'll be July when you read it, but now is the time to start planning for the 1990 Fantasia Fair.

Betty Ann Lind, the fair director, wanted us to remind everyone that the fair offers work scholarships for community members with special skills need at the fair.

The skills and number of people required are:

- Newsletter editor (1) - must have MS-DOS computer skills
- Assistant photographers (2)
- Supervising Sound Tech. (1)
- Assistant Sound Techs. (2)
- Videographer (1) - must have their own VHS camera
- Assistant Videographer (1)
- Administrative Go-fers (2)

Anyone interested in applying for one of these jobs should send a resumé to Lind at P.O. Box 11254, Lincolnia Station, Alexandria, VA 22312. If accepted, you'll receive a hefty discount on the fair fee.

NGN

BOSTON - The whole crew at Gender Expressions must have a knot in their pantyhose. We've rarely seen such anger smeared across the printed page. Their targets seem to be the health care establishment and the Standards of Care for the treatment of transsexualism.

They also made a big hoo-ha about the Tapestry (published by the International Foundation for Gender Education) "borrowing" and excerpting copy without written permission from the publisher.

Maybe they should read their own stuff. Editor, Janet Christon, revisits an article from their charter issue entitled Future View. In her remarks she makes it sound as if the original article was her own.

Well, we know differently, and Christon should know better. The original Future View was reprinted in Gender Expressions with permission from another publication. Christon just forgot to mention that.

We guess it's easy to forget your principles when you're so angry.

NGN

FULLERTON, CALIF. - The girls of Powder Puffs of Orange County (PPOC) were treated to a soliloquy in their May newsletter from president Joan on the benefits of becoming a Tri-Ess chapter. The part we liked the best was: "Jane Ellen Fairfax... is now chairman of the board and she sees a need for Tri-Ess becoming a more virile... part of the community..." Virile? How appropos. Does the word "oxymoron" ring a familiar note?

Prez Joan is also the Tri-Ess Director of Membership for the Western Region. Hmmm. Is conscription illegal in California?

NGN

BROOKLINE, MASS. - Hopeful is the name of a special program aimed at couples where one partner is a crossdresser. The objective is not to deal with crossdressing but all the other related issues that crop up in a relationship. It also deals with changing gender roles in society.

Sponsored by Theseus Counseling Services and Ari Kane, the program was held in Vermont over the June 22-24 weekend.

If you missed this workshop, contact Ari for the next one. Write Theseus Counseling Services, 223 Harvard St., Suite 302, Brookline, MA 02146 or call 617-277-4360.

NGN

ALTONA, AUSTR. - There's Aussies in the air lately...

We received a nice note from Ms. Elaine Barrie of the Elaine Barrie Project in Australia, along with a copy of their monthly magazine Nu-Scene. It was very nicely done and we thoroughly enjoyed the piece by Lady Paula Howard.

Howard's writing showed up this month in no less than three periodicals that crossed our desk; Nu-Scene, Narcissus (TransEssex, U.K.), and Gender Euphoria (Boulton & Park Society, Texas).

Is that some sort of record?

NGN

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. - "Finally, in one place, everything you wanted to know about the 'T' phenomenon."

Yep, that's what the press release for From Masculine to Feminine And All Points In Between says. Everything! In one place! We can't wait to see the tractor trailer that delivers this baby.

Author Jennifer Anne Stevens was a guest speaker at the I.F.G.E. convention in Boston and she was kind enough to give the attendees a run down on the book. It does try to cover everything from makeup to sex reassignment, but that sounds like too large a bite to cover adequately in one book.

We'll reserve final judgment until our copy arrives. Meanwhile you may request your copy from Different Path Press, PO Box 251, Harvard Square, Cambridge, MA 02238. Enclose a check or money order for $22.45 (P&H included).

NGN

WOODLAND HILLS, CALIF. - Kymerleigh Richards, editor of the Valley Girls Cross-Talk, wonders whether or not the Vals should be offended at receiving a MONA from us this past April. (Actually, the MONA was awarded to Val Gal Eileen McCleary.)

Offended? We hope not. Embarrassed for McCleary, maybe.

NGN

TORONTO, ONT. - Things are heating up in the Great White North.

Two transformation services are engaged in an advertising war in this city. Deb Pyke of Fantasyland and Paddy Aldridge of Walk on the Wildside are trading snipes.

Pyke had a captive audience in the Monarch Social Club, with which she is affiliated. Apparently, a disgruntled Monarch member delivered the club mailing list to Aldridge, who promptly sent out a mailer for her services.

Pyke was incensed and called Aldridge with threats of a lawsuit. Monarch sent a letter to its members encouraging them to sue Aldridge for breach of confidence. (Right! A TV is going to take someone to court for "exposing" them.)

Aldridge followed with a second mailing assuring Monarch members that their names and addresses are still secure with her.

While Aldridge took advantage of an opportunity to expand her business, the real nasty in this episode is the Monarch member that gave Aldridge the mailing list. She should be drawn, quartered and converted to fish food.

NGN

UPPER MONTCLAIR, N.J. - If you're into leather, rubber, or shiny vinyl, then you'll be interested in a very unique showroom being developed by Constance and John of Constance Enterprises, those same folks who produce the Dressing for Pleasure Ball each fall.

The showroom is open by appointment only. It will feature clothing, lingerie, shoes and other paraphernalia garnered from all corners of the world. Only the finest quality items will be available. You may inspect items at the showroom and then place an order.

For a private appointment and showing, call John at 201-746-0072. And ask about the next DfP Ball.

HELP US TO HELP YOU

Renaissance is a non-profit organization staffed by unpaid volunteers. Our operating capital comes from you, the members. Most national members pay only their membership dues which covers the production of this newsletter each month leaving a little left over for other activities. We typically finish the year with a few hundred dollars in the treasury.

Perhaps some of you have forgotten that Renaissance is also a Federal tax exempt, publicly supported entity. You can make donations to Renaissance which are deductible on your Federal income tax. We receive an occasional donation.

We tried a few fund raising ideas, but the response has been weak. We also considered private voice mailboxes and you rejected that.

So, here is a chance for you to tell us what additional benefits would entice you to make donations to the organization. What can we do for you to make Renaissance better? More pages in the newsletter? More week night meetings? More outside activities?

Send your ideas to Membership Suggestions, c/o Renaissance, PO Box 552, King of Prussia, PA 19406.

TIPPING TIPS

Minorities generally have terrible reputations when it comes to tipping for service. Lesbians are particularly ill-treated in restaurants because many gay male waiters believe them to be lousy tippers.

Transvestites and transsexuals seem to be lumped into a similar category for tipping.

As a public service, we're providing a tipping guide based on currently recommended practice.

- Restaurant service - Tip 15 percent of the total bill. Tip 20 percent if your server was especially attendant.
- Parking Attendant - Tip $1 or $2 when your car is delivered.
- Bellhop in hotel/Skycap at airport - Tip $1 per bag, more if the bags are large or heavy.
- Maids in hotel - Tip $1 per night. Leave tip in a plainly marked envelope.
- Hairdresser - Tip $5 for a wash & cut, more for a perm.
- Manicurist - Tip $2 for sculptured nails, $1 for polish only.
