

TUESDAY, JAN. 30, 1900.

Ellis Glenn on Trial.

There was a large attendance at Criminal Court this morning. This was probably caused by the report that Ellis Glenn would be brought out to plead to the indictment found against her.

Joe Dillard, who was indicted for shooting Bob Clark, appeared in company with his attorney, Geo. W. Neale, plead not guilty and made a motion to quash the indictments. The motion was overruled and the case was set for a hearing on Feb. 6.

There was an instant craning of necks when Jailor Chas. Cook walked into the Court room accompanied by Ellis Glenn about 11 o'clock. None of her attorneys was present when she came in and the Court directed that she be furnished with a seat facing the Court. Miss Glenn wore a plain costume of black, black coat and a black fascinator. She is a severely plain looking female, and she would need little disguise to pass as a man.

Judge Jackson, addressing her, said that there was an indictment against her, and asked her if she had an attorney.

The prisoner replied that Mr. Caldwell was her attorney. After she had taken her seat Mr. Caldwell appeared and stated that before proceeding with the case he desired to have a copy of the deed of trust upon which she was indicted and the requisition of the Governor.

Prosecutor Laird said that the requisition was not in the papers—nothing but the original warrant from Squire Drennen, and this was at the disposal of the attorneys for the opposite side.

Judge Jackson explained that the requisition was for the protection of Mr. Richardson, and he knew of no law whereby it should be filed with the papers in the case. The attorneys asked that further action be suspended until the afternoon session and it was ordered by the Court, who directed that the prisoner be returned to jail.—Sentinel.