

Dear Ann Landers,

I am a transvestite whose story would be a carbon copy of the transvestite letter in your column a few weeks ago. There is one exception though, my children, ages 5 & 8 are well aware of my desire to wear women's clothing and see me frequently dressed in skirts. My wife and I decided to share this information with our children as they grow up. We felt keeping this in the closet from them would lead to a surprise discovery on their part that could in turn lead to psychological problems on our children's part. As to deception and lies. You also informed that if some might imitate their dad's in such cases. Studies have ~~pro~~ shown that this is not the case.

Over the ^{imitate} years my wife and I have had hundreds of questions on transvestitism among males. I am sure thousands of families share our experiences. You could provide a great public service to such families by informing them of the existence of Tri-Sig, a society of male transvestites and their wives to help transvestites and their families. Two of the greatest problems facing male transvestites ~~are~~ trying to understand themselves and have society understand them. ~~I~~ I know you have provided a great deal of advice to transvestites and their families and I for one am grateful for your help. I know sharing the existence of ~~A~~ Tri-Sig with your readers will be a great service to thousands of your followers.

Thank you
