

That Man-Woman.

[Memphis Ledger.]

Frances Thompson, or "Crutchy," the bogus woman and vile miscreant who was exposed and detected on yesterday, was placed on the chain-gang yesterday forenoon. Crowds of men and boys gathered around the notorious Frances, who, in man's clothing, presented a different appearance than he did when dressed in faded silk and gay colors, and with parasol raised was plying his nefarious traffic along the streets and acting as a procuress. This irredeemable villain had been visiting numberless houses in this city, pretending to be a fortune-teller. Numbers of young girls, both white and black, have been enticed into the den of this villain for the worst purposes. He carried on a regular trade between men and women, acting as a procuress, or as a kind of broker between both. Thompson says that he came to this city with his mother and mistress from Richmond, Va. His master's name was Mr. Robert Wallace, and that when brought here he (Thompson) was very small and wore a girl's dress, and has worn women's clothing ever since. To many this vile miscreant was a terror and black-mailer. Dr. Nuttall, the physician through whose exertions this criminal fraud was exposed, deserves well of the public. It has removed a social ulcer of a horrible character from our city forever. Should the notorious villain, Thompson, get released from confinement the police authorities will no doubt order him to leave the city. Memphis has had its Madam Fouchard at last.
